Imagine running away to sea without giving up your day job! In this travel memoir, the author and her family seek to shorten a daunting commute to Silicon Valley by moving to a boat. Floating Point chronicles an adventure lived beneath the radar of suburban life as the new owners of the Egret learn the ropes and are transformed by their life on the water.

In her early traveling days, Shelley Buck once thumbed a ride from India to Afghanistan. She was a scriptwriter for Knocking at the Gateway of Gold, a multi-part history of San Francisco produced by the Haight-Ashbury Community Radio. She has taught writing at colleges around the San Francisco Bay Area. Currently the editor of ePícaro.com, an international web-based journal of travel narratives, she lives with her family in the Santa Cruz Mountains. Floating Point is her first book. More are on the way.
